1. Introduction

Status of this document

1.1. The Equality & Human Rights Commission for St Helena (EHRC) has drawn up this framework document, in consultation with the St Helena Government (SHG). This document sets out the broad framework within which the EHRC will operate. This document does not convey any legal powers and responsibilities.

1.2. The document will normally be reviewed by the EHRC and SHG every three years. The next document review will take place in 2023.

1.3. The document may, however, be reviewed at any other time. EHRC will manage the provision of amendments, which will be agreed with SHG.

1.4. The document is signed and dated by SHG and the EHRC. Copies of the document and any subsequent amendments should be placed on the EHRC's website.

2. Founding legislation and role of the EHRC

Founding legislation and classification

2.1 The EHRC is a non-departmental public body (NDPB), established under the Commission for Equality and Human Rights Ordinance 2015. Its duties stem from the Constitution of St Helena, Ascension and Tristan da Cunha 2009 and its powers from the Commission for Equality & Human Rights Ordinance 2015.

2.2 The EHRC is to be recognised at the United Nations as operating in compliance with the General Assembly resolution 48/134 (the 'Paris Principles'). The 'Paris Principles' (Appendix 2) list requirements to be met by a national human rights institution. This includes having an infrastructure which is suited to the smooth conduct of its activities, in particular adequate funding. The purpose of this funding should be to enable it to have its own staff and premises, in order to be independent of the Government and not be subject to financial control which might affect its independence. A national institution must be vested with competence to promote and protect human rights. It should retain as broad a mandate as possible, which must be clearly set forth in a constitutional or legislative text, specifying its composition and its sphere of competence. The composition of the national institution and the appointment of its members, whether by means of an election or otherwise, must be established in accordance with a procedure which affords all necessary guarantees to ensure the pluralist representation of the social forces (of civilian society) involved in the protection and promotion of human rights. In order to ensure a stable mandate for the members of the national institution, without which there can be no real independence, their appointment must be effected by an official act which establishes the specific duration of the mandate.

Role

2.3 The EHRC is provided for in the Commission for Equality & Human Rights Ordinance 2015 and was formally established on 10th December 2015 to promote understanding of the importance of human rights, equality and diversity, to monitor the effectiveness of relevant law and practice and to advise the government what steps need to be taken to fully protect human rights in St Helena.

2.4 As the national human rights institution in St Helena, the Commission has a range of duties and responsibilities including contributing to the monitoring of international human rights treaties in St Helena. The core aspects of its daily operation are fundamental to fulfilling its mission. They are key to its compliance with the Paris Principles and the principles of ethical standards in public life. The EHRC functions include:

- Providing an opinion to the Executive Council about
 - the effectiveness of any relevant enactment;
 - the amendment, repeal, consolidation of any relevant enactment; and
 - the likely effect of a proposed change of law.
- Conducting investigations on systemic human rights issues. To do so, the EHRC may enter places of detention after receiving relevant permissions, and can compel individuals and agencies to give oral testimony or to produce documents as provided by the Commission for Equality & Human Rights Ordinance 2015;
- Promoting understanding and awareness of the importance of human rights in St Helena, and undertaking or supporting research and educational activities;
- Procuring legal advice and initiating strategic legal cases;
- Monitoring the implementation of international human rights treaties;
- Engaging with other Human Rights Institutions.

3. Governance and responsibilities

Corporate governance

1. A national institution shall be vested with competence to promote and protect human rights.
2. A national institution shall be given as broad a mandate as possible, which shall be clearly set forth in a constitutional or legislative text, specifying its composition and its sphere of competence.
3. A national institution shall, inter alia, have the following responsibilities:
 - (a) To submit to the Government, Parliament and any other competent body, on an advisory basis either at the request of the authorities concerned or through the exercise of its power to hear a matter without higher referral, opinions, recommendations, proposals and reports on any matters concerning the promotion and protection of human rights; the national institution may decide to publicize them; these opinions, recommendations, proposals and reports, as well as any prerogative of the national institution, shall relate to the following areas:
 - (i) Any legislative or administrative provisions, as well as provisions relating to judicial organizations, intended to preserve and extend the protection of human rights; in that connection, the national institution shall examine the legislation and administrative provisions in force, as well as bills and proposals, and shall make such recommendations as it deems appropriate in order to ensure that these provisions conform to the fundamental principles of human rights; it shall, if necessary, recommend the adoption of new legislation, the amendment of legislation in force and the adoption or amendment of measures;
 - (ii) Any situation of violation of human rights which it decides to take up;
 - (iii) The preparation of reports on the national situation with regard to human rights in general, and on more specific matters;
 - (iv) Drawing the attention of the Government to situations in any part of the country where human rights are violated and making proposals to it for initiatives to put an end to such situations and, where necessary, expressing an opinion on the positions and reactions of the Government;
 - (b) To promote and ensure the harmonization of national legislation regulations and practices with the international human rights instruments to which the State is a party, and their effective implementation;

(c) To encourage ratification of the above-mentioned instruments or accession to those instruments, and to ensure their implementation;

(d) To contribute to the reports which States are required to submit to United Nations bodies and committees, and to regional institutions, pursuant to their treaty obligations and, where necessary, to express an opinion on the subject, with due respect for their independence;

(e) To cooperate with the United Nations and any other organization in the United Nations system, the regional institutions and the national institutions of other countries that are competent in the areas of the promotion and protection of human rights;

(f) To assist in the formulation of programmes for the teaching of, and research into, human rights and to take part in their execution in schools, universities and professional circles;

(g) To publicize human rights and efforts to combat all forms of discrimination, in particular racial discrimination, by increasing public awareness, especially through information and education and by making use of all press organs.

Composition and guarantees of independence and pluralism

1. The composition of the national institution and the appointment of its members, whether by means of an election or otherwise, shall be established in accordance with a procedure which affords all necessary guarantees to ensure the pluralist representation of the social forces (of civilian society) involved in the promotion and protection of human rights, particularly by powers which will enable effective cooperation to be established with, or through the presence of, representatives of:

(a) Non-governmental organizations responsible for human rights and efforts to combat racial discrimination, trade unions, concerned social and professional organizations, for example, associations of lawyers, doctors, journalists and eminent scientists;

(b) Trends in philosophical or religious thought;

(c) Universities and qualified experts;

(d) Parliament;

(e) Government departments (if these are included, their representatives should participate in the deliberations only in an advisory capacity).

2. The national institution shall have an infrastructure which is suited to the smooth conduct of its activities, in particular adequate funding. The purpose of this funding should be to enable it to have its own staff and premises, in order to be independent of the Government and not be subject to financial control which might affect its independence.

3. In order to ensure a stable mandate for the members of the national institution, without which there can be no real independence, their appointment shall be effected by an official act which shall establish the specific duration of the mandate. This mandate may be renewable, provided that the pluralism of the institution's membership is ensured.

Methods of operation

Within the framework of its operation, the national institution shall:

- (g) In view of the fundamental role played by the non-governmental organizations in expanding the work of the national institutions, develop relations with the non-governmental organizations devoted to promoting and protecting human rights, to economic and social development, to combating racism, to protecting particularly vulnerable groups (especially children, migrant workers, refugees, physically and mentally disabled persons) or to specialized areas.

Additional principles concerning the status of commissions with quasi-jurisdictional competence

A national institution may be authorized to hear and consider complaints and petitions concerning individual situations. Cases may be brought before it by individuals, their representatives, third parties, non-governmental organizations, associations of trade unions or any other representative organizations.

In such circumstances, and without prejudice to the principles stated above concerning the other powers of the commissions, the functions entrusted to them may be based on the following principles:

- (a) Seeking an amicable settlement through conciliation or, within the limits prescribed by the law, through binding decisions or, where necessary, on the basis of confidentiality;
- (b) Informing the party who filed the petition of his rights, in particular the remedies available to him, and promoting his access to them;
- (c) Hearing any complaints or petitions or transmitting them to any other competent authority within the limits prescribed by the law;
- (d) Making recommendations to the competent authorities, especially by proposing amendments or reforms of the laws, regulations and administrative practices, especially if they have created the difficulties encountered by the persons filing the petitions in order to assert their rights.

And recalling the need to identify areas for strengthened interaction between NHRIs and Parliaments bearing in mind that the different institutional models of NHRIs should be respected,

Adopts the following principles aimed at providing guidance on how the interaction and cooperation between NHRIs and Parliament should be developed:

1. Parliament's role in establishing a National Human Rights Institution (NHRI) and securing its functioning, independence and accountability

A) Founding Law

- 1) Parliaments while deliberating the draft legislation for the establishment of a national human rights institution should consult widely with relevant stakeholders.
- 2) Parliaments should develop a legal framework for the NHRI which secures its independence and its direct accountability to Parliament, in compliance with the Principles related to national institutions (Paris Principles) and taking into account the General Observations of the International Coordinating Committee of national institutions for the promotion and protection of human rights (ICC) and best practices.
- 3) Parliaments should have the exclusive competence to legislate for the establishment of a NHRI and for any amendments to the founding law.
- 4) Parliaments, during the consideration and adoption of possible amendments to the founding law of a NHRI, should scrutinise such proposed amendments with a view to ensuring the independence and effective functioning of such institution, and carry out consultation with the members of NHRIs and with other stakeholders such as civil society organisations.
- 5) Parliaments should keep the implementation of the founding law under review.

B) Financial independence

- 6) Parliaments should ensure the financial independence of NHRIs by including in the founding law the relevant provisions.
- 7) NHRIs should submit to Parliaments a Strategic Plan and/or an Annual Programme of activities. Parliaments should take into account the Strategic Plan and/or Annual Programme of activities submitted by the NHRI while discussing budget proposals to ensure financial independence of the institution.
- 8) Parliaments should invite the members of NHRIs to debate the Strategic Plan and/or its annual programme of activities in relation to the annual budget.
- 9) Parliaments should ensure that NHRIs have sufficient resources to perform the functions assigned to them by the founding law.

10) Parliaments should clearly lay down in the founding law a transparent selection and appointment process, as well as for the dismissal of the members of NHRIs in case of such an eventuality, involving civil society where appropriate.

11) Parliaments should ensure the openness and transparency of the appointment process.

12) Parliaments should secure the independence of a NHRI by incorporating in the founding law a provision on immunity for actions taken in an official capacity.

13) Parliaments should clearly lay down in the founding law that where there is a vacancy in the composition of the membership of a NHRI, that vacancy must be filled within a reasonable time. After expiration of the tenure of office of a member of a NHRI, such member should continue in office until the successor takes office.

15) NHRIs should submit to Parliament an annual report on activities, along with a summary of its accounts, and also report on the human rights situation in the country and on any other issue that is related to human rights.
