Too Small a World by Vera Milton Smith

Vera and Charles Milton Smith lived in St Helena in the 1970's when he was vicar of the cathedral church of St Paul's. They loved their life there and had great affection for the people they came to know, although it was only for a few years. The time soon came when the small world was just too far away from the grandchildren who were being born, and they returned to England. Charles died in 1991 and Vera in 1999, she left a typewritten manuscript but only now, in 2022, is it being published.
